

ERRATA FOR LITHICS 37

Mistakes are sometimes made during the publication process and it is unfortunate where this occurs within the pages of Lithics. Regrettably, two errors were made in the print volume of Lithics 37 (2016) and the editorial team would like to apologise for this:

1. Leder, D. 2016. Core reduction strategies at the Initial Upper Palaeolithic sites of Ksar Akil and Abou Halka in Lebanon. Lithics: the journal of the Lithic Studies Society 37: 33–53.
In the above article, Figure 5 is missing. This has been corrected in the online version.
2. Blundell, L. 2016. Hominin activity on the Chalk uplands of southeast Britain: a geomorphological perspective on the archaeological record. Lithics: the Journal of the Lithic Studies Society 37: 54–64.
Labels were missing from Figures 1 and 2. These have been corrected in the online version.

The corrected versions of these papers are available online via the journal's website. Because of the required corrections, the pagination of the volume has been updated. Readers are advised to use the online versions of all articles when citing papers from Lithics 37.
